1. The title of the invention is not descriptive. A new title is required that is clearly indicative of the invention to which the claims are directed.

2. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1, 2 and 20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Yamashita et al.

Note Fig. 11A, which shows a multiplexer circuit 1110 (it is a type of MUX because it performs the function of selecting, as output, either signal MB or MT which correspond to the inverse of inputs DT and DB, respectively, in essentially the same manner as in applicant's Fig. 4); the recited first and second tri-state inverters read on inverter circuits 1101 and 1102, respectively; the recited first and second multiplexer input nodes read on the terminals receiving signals DT and DB, respectively; the recited first and second multiplexer output nodes read on the terminals outputting signals MB and MT, respectively; and the recited first and second switch circuits read on inverter circuits 1104 and 1103, respectively. The control signal of claims 2 and 20 reads on clock signal CK.

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 11 and 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yamashita et al.

The use of the Fig. 11A circuitry in a column driver circuit, though not disclosed, nevertheless would have been obvious to those having ordinary skill in the art who know that column driver circuits typically employ multiplexer/latch circuits such as that taught by Yamashita et al in Fig. 11A. the motivation to use the specific circuit taught by Yamashita et al in Fig. 11A is to obtain the benefits of higher speed data transfer and faster set-up time, as discussed by the reference. Thus, claims 11 and 15 do not patentably distinguish over Yamashita et al's Fig. 11A.

4. Claims 3-10, 12-14 and 16-19 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
